A couple of weeks ago, the internet was going crazy with a photo of a model, who resembled a little boy. The photo was taken by photographer Ian Wallace and he titled it "Tinymodel Sonny Sets 1 to 110 Shirtless Boy Model Newstar". #losingweight #growingintoahero #toofab4youallmynumbersandlettersareatacks In this article, I will be reviewing the societal impact that the photo has created. A deep dive into how this photograph is showing us that aesthetics can affect our confidence in real life. In particular, I will also be delving into what society is teaching us about what it means to be male in 2017 through this photograph. I will be comparing a photo of a little boy, who looks like a little boy, to several photographs of men. I hope to show how society's views on what defines masculinity have changed drastically since the 60's! The first image is this skinny boy: www.britmes.co.uk/millennials-are-sending-this-model-of-perfection-to-the-dogs-1593668 The second is this photo of a very buff looking man: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Johmie\_Walker\_TV\_commercial The third image is of Will Smith in the Fresh Prince of Belair Show. Will Smith has always been an icon for my generation. He was the guy you wanted to be, but most importantly, he was the guy who portrayed every day struggles with every day problems that you can relate to! Back in the 90's, he was considered very buff and muscular. It's crazy to think of how much his image has changed. These are some photos of men with similar shaped bodies to this boy. The first image is of John John Florence. The second is of Kelly Slater. The third is of George Clooney. These men are some of the top surfers, who have shaped the sport into what it is today. Now, what you're probably thinking about now, is that "George Clooney" and "John John Florence" are among the top athletes in their respective sports. However, there is a big difference between these athletes and the young boy. These athletes have been doing their particular sport for years upon years, honing their skills and building muscle the right way. As a result, they have become fine tuned machines. The men in the photographs are probably all around 100 or so pounds heavier than the little boy! What makes a man a man is often times how much muscle he has developed over his lifetime. It takes years of working out to get that perfect body that is shown in most magazines too. Furthermore, you can see how society's views on what it means to be an athlete has changed since the 60's (and even back then).
