We report the case of a 43-year-old man presenting with a six-year history of swelling and pain in the right middle and lower face. Imaging examinations revealed severe destruction of both frontal and maxillary sinuses. All of the facial bones and the wall of sinuses were involved, and marked encasement of the carotid arteries were seen. The patient's pain, local swelling, and facial discomfort were well controlled by local infiltration with bupivacaine 0.25% in saline solution during surgical procedures, but unsatisfactory results were obtained, especially in the maxillary sinus. Postoperative chemotherapy with actinomycin D had no effect. The surgical removal of the affected bone resulted in a three- to four-year duration of pain-free stability, after the chemotherapy regimen was completed. Although the patient initially underwent combined therapy with chemotherapy and surgical removal of the affected bone, the pain and maxillary sinus swelling were well controlled by the local infiltration of bupivacaine 0.25%. The patient has been pain-free for three to four years without any progression of the lesions in the maxillary sinus.Hallo there! We're the Sakurai family. My family is from Tokyo, Japan. Kpbsetkeyfllkp?v1.0.0Q: How to fix duplicate objects when adding a dynamic object to an array? I have an array that looks like this var avg :[MP3] = [] then, I get an audio object from a streaming service that looks like this var myObject = {file: this.url, artist: this.title, title: this.title, duration: this.duration, bitRate: this.bitRate } It has all the necessary fields for my class to compile. So far, so good. Now I need to add it to the array so it looks like this: var avg :[MP3] = [] avg.append(myObject) But I get a duplicate object error. I need the audio object to be able to compile into a class and it won't let me do that. I guess I am not adding it to the array correctly. What am I doing wrong? A: Could you not just add it to a dictionary and access it that way? var myDict = MP3 myDict.append(myObject) avg = myDict[0] The role of 24-hour ambulatory blood pressure as a predictor of subsequent hypertension.
